Bellingham, Wash. -- Drs. William L. Lombardi and Noah J. Jones, both members of Bellingham-based North Cascade Cardiology practice group, have authored a lead article in the national medical professional magazine, Cardiac Interventions Today.

Titled "Coronary CTO Intervention", the article outlines the development and economic impacts of chronic total coronary occlusions (CTO) intervention programs as a component of successful cardiovascular practice groups.

Dr. William L. Lombardi William Lombardi, MD, FACC, FSCAI, an internationally recognized expert in CTO intervention, also includes general and interventional cardiology and heart failure management in his medical practice. He is a graduate of Tulane Medical School in New Orleans, La., and served an internal medicine residency and a cardiology fellowship at the University of Utah, Salt Lake City, Utah. He also held a heart failure/cardiac transplant fellowship at Utah Transplantation Affiliated Hospitals in Salt Lake City.

A graduate of Wright State University's Boonshoft School of Medicine, Dayton, Ohio, and the George Washington University School of Public Health in Washington, D.C., Noah Jones, MD, practices general and interventional cardiology, peripheral vascular disease and interventional treatment. He served an internal medicine residency at Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, Ohio and held a cardiovascular disease and interventional fellowships at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich.

Dr. Noah J. Jones "North Cascade Cardiology is pleased to offer this level of expertise in CTO intervention," said Jerry Marschke, CEO of the 13-member medical practice. "We believe this program delivers long-term benefits for patients and merits the confidence of referring physicians."
